The great rush of immigrants from Europe to the United States continues unabated. The state of New York keeps a record of alien arrivals at the port of New York and the figures for the last quarter of 1905 have just been issued by the bureau at Albany. They show that the record-breaking total for the last quarter of 1904 was beaten in 1905 by 9,000. From October 1 to December 31, 1905, 164,539 immigrants entered the United States through New York. The greatest increase was in the number of Italians. There were 140,000 immigrants over 14 years of age and more than one-fourth of them could not write or read in their own language or any other. The report says this fact is not "altogether reassuring," and the general public will agree with it.

There could be no stronger emphasis of the desirability of an educational test for intending citizens. It is not possible to believe that persons who have not had ambition enough to learn to read and write in their own language will learn to read and write in a tongue unknown to them.

Now a man may be a good citizen without being able to read or write, but the odds are decidedly against that result. How is it possible for one who does not understand the language to become familiar with the laws, the customs, the form of government of the country? They cannot become desirable citizens in the most ordinary acceptance of the expression. Yet they will in time be naturalized, they will vote and they may, in close elections, select our public officials.

Our immigration laws need strengthening badly. America is big enough and great enough to accommodate a good many thousands, even millions, more than are comprised in its population at present, but in justice to Americans who have made the country what it is the most rigid care should be exercised in the admission of immigrants. We need strong men and women from other lands, but we emphatically do not need the offscourings, the riffraff, the vermin of Europe.

The Reno Gazette mentions some old Silver leaders who "left the Silver convention at Winnemucca" at the last State Convention. These men were a disturbing element in the party and were simply refused seats in the Convention after being denied recognition they rushed out and said they had "boiled." They put up a ticket and failed to poll the ten percent necessary to enable them to get on the ballot this year.

They simply bob up to keep their names before the public. Who ever heard of Tim Grant, Joe Mack and their following except in connection with parties they get up themselves?
